

Why states in the House Follette holds the balance in the Senate. No president could be chosen, and Senator Follette is in a position to name the president who would succeed the vacancy. He intends to name Charles W. Bryan. So La Follette is running, not for president but for the power to name the people a president whom they support and few have favored for the office. Here are voters who lack energy for the candidates who are elected, they must at least have some partiality for the person who elects them. The election itself, to retain it for permanent use. The election of a distinguished public man who has the general confidence of the American people, scarcely be intolerable even to those whose personal choice he is. The real public calamity is to be in no election at all, not merely in filling the vacancy with a misfit accident, undermining the whole system of regular election. Any election the people is one step in the course of democracy. To let choice to the arbitrary of a single man is to surrender democracy. That is full autocracy, naked and unadorned.
