AN EPA THAT WORKS RECONCILING ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AND ECONOMIC GROWTH

When President Trump signed an executive order earlier this year undoing Obama-era environmental regulations, he told the crowd assembled at the Environmental Protection Agency: "I am taking historic steps to lift restrictions on American energy, to reverse government intrusion, and to cancel job-killing regulations." The man tasked with carrying out this mission is new EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt, who previously served as Attorney General of Oklahoma.

As Oklahoma AG, Pruitt was a leading opponent of overreach by the Obama EPA, resisting initiatives to impose federal control over carbon emissions, via the Clean Power Plan, and to expand the agency's power to regulate development, via the Clean Water Rule. Now, as the EPA's boss, Administrator Pruitt is presenting a sharp contrast with the previous administration, declaring: "I believe that we as a nation can be both pro-energy and jobs, and pro-environment. We don't have to choose between the two."

Administrator Pruitt has a full agenda, from efforts to increase the quality of American air and water to determining the future of the Paris Agreement on climate struck by the Obama Administration. Please join Administrator Pruitt, as he shares his vision for the EPA with Howard Husock, MI Vice President for Research and Publications.
