evidence shows. But you are going to have the evidence back in that jury room to look at.

You are going to have the benefit of the documents that Mr. Shellenberger talked about, and you are going to have the benefit of the testimony of the industrial hygienist who worked for Owens-Illinois, Mr. Hazard.

And he is going to be able to tell you -- and, unfortunately, it has to be through deposition, because all of this happened a lot of years ago, and Mr. Hazard is deceased -- to explain to you what Owens-Illinois did with the material that it received and what it thought about it.

I want to take a few minutes to talk to you about the Saranac Laboratory. It was the preeminent testing facility in the 1940s and the 1950s.

What Owens-Illinois did was, it hired it. And it said, Saranac, can you help us out here? Can you test our product?

Why did we do that? Because Kaylo contained two raw ingredients, asbestos and silica. And there
