Subject: Newsletters

Recently I had my first experience reading your EPA newsletter. Specifically your 8/21/17 article regarding a New York Times news article regarding the pesticide chlorpyrifos.

I was frankly shocked - not by the article but by the very unprofessional tone and style of writing. It reminded me of the blaring of the news sheets on the grocery aisle which everyone knows is filled with outlandish "alien contact" stories or total hyperbole and distortions. Only the truly uneducated believe a word of it.

With that thought in my mind, I felt that I must tell you that your unprofessional presentation immediately made me doubt the veracity of your statements.

Please consider a more factual presentation rather than a deriding, mocking tone. I expect my tax monies to be used to tell me the facts while respecting other points of views. I will be looking for improvements in your future postings.

Sincerely

Kate slisher
