

Rezonning would give San Francisco more control over development of the land if it is ever made available to the city.

PRESS PLAN.

The planners also decided that if the Supervisors agree with their plans for the Presidio, they will suggest the same zoning changes for Fort Mason and Fort Miley.

The rezoning problem was handed to the Supervisors because the tremendous clerical work involved is too much for the commission itself to prepare.

For one thing, the commission's staff would have to track down and notify some 2,000 property owners within 300 feet of the Presidio, while the Supervisors can process the rezoning as a routine ordinance.

PERMIT APPEAL.

The commission also: 1—Asked the Board of Permit Appeals to reconsider the request of Ed's Chuck Wagon, on Lombard St. between Webster and Buchanan Sts., to put a 16-foot neon cowboy sign on top of its building. The commission had turned down the plea. Commission president Roger Lapham Jr. termed the decision to allow the sign "disgraceful," and a start toward "making a Las Vegas development on Lombard St."

2—Approved plans of the Recreation Park Commission to try to acquire a 12-acre parcel of Fort Funston that the Government plans to sell. The land is at the intersection of Lake Merced Blvd. and Skyline Blvd.
