Sorry I am not really following this thread so excuse me if I am behind the eight ball. However if the intention is still to have someone give a blessing, we must know the name of the person now to get them through security and also have their remarks written and sent to WH Comms ASAP

My understanding is that Senator Stuart Adams has been asked to give the prayer. It is not our custom to write out prayers. We give them extemporaneously and from the heart. You'll just have to trust us on this one...

Ok upon further discussion among WH folks since there will be no tribal blessing a prayer is not necessary. Thanks everyone

There was never going to be a tribal blessing - it was always going to be a standard prayer. Why is it being axed?

I'm a big fan of the prayer and feel like not having it is a huge mistake. Adams is a solid source. I would stick with him and not have the Native American blessing.

Sorry for the confusion. No one in WH was aware of the prayer so this js not being axed. The tribal prayer was a DOI idea- totally unrelated- I think this was all a big miscommunication, par for the course for a big event!!
