before administrative bodies that we refer to as forensic economics.

Q And can you briefly describe for us your educational background?

A I received my Bachelor's degree in 1971 from Howard University in Washington, D.C., and that degree was in economics.

I received my Master's degree in economics in 1974 from American University which is also located in Washington, D.C.

And I received my doctorate degree in economics in 1984 from American University.

Q And just briefly, if you haven't touched on it already, can you describe for us your employment since you received your doctorate in 1984?

A Okay. When I was finishing my doctorate, I was employed at the University of the District of Columbia, faculty member in the Department of Economics.

I was a member of the faculty first as an Assistant Professor and subsequently as Associate
