JOHN SCHIESZER: "Scientific studies do not conclusively show there is a link between PCBs and cancer in humans. That's according to an epidemiologist for the St. Louis based Monsanto Company. His name is William Gaffey and he testified today in Huron County Circuit Court.

"Monsanto and two Michigan silo companies are being sued for $4.3 million by Owendale, Michigan farmer, Roger Haley and his family.

"The Haleys charge that they suffered physical problems and financial woes, including the death of hundreds of cattle from PCBs that were used in a silo sealant on their farm.

"In the suit the family says it faced an increased chance of cancer and heart disease because of the chemical."
