Drinking Involved in 34% Of Auto Deaths, Police Find

Close to every three fatal auto accidents during the last year involved persons who had been drinking, according to recently released police records in Los Angeles, California.

Police said reviewing the effect of drinking on drivers' ability to operate a motor vehicle, demonstrating the reason why auto insurance rates for non-drinkers can be much lower than those for those who drink. The general public is urged to be aware of the danger to themselves and others when drinking and driving.
