Fla.—(AP)—A radioadjustments that probably would draws pictures, talks prove confusing. with remote push- Complete automatic operation from the sending point seemed to ol— was announced be the answer. the Miami Herald.

is facsimile. The research and development program. The result: A special attachment which uses high frequency radio to turn on and off switches in facsimile receiver throughout the newspaper's area of an approximate 70 mile radius. Every control is operated from the Herald, though time clocks cut on and off the power in the receivers.

There are no knobs on the receiver. The set is noiseless. The ink cannot smudge.

An attachment in the home radio—taking up about the same space as a record player— delivers a continuous series of pages eight by 11½ inches, on which is permanently printed news and photographs.

The Herald delivers four facsimile editions, totaling 20 pages, a day.

It is using its transmissions, the news report and wirephotos of the Associated Press.
