you know, I really felt like I needed a car and some money, so through working with my uncle, I was able to get a job at Green Spring -- I mean at Cloverland Dairy, and I would get up at 4 o'clock in the morning and my father carried me. He made me get up.

I was due at 4 o'clock and my job was to clean the inside of the cases where the milk was. And I did that from 4 to 12. And then he taught me, if I really need to make money, I need to make the other job. And I guess there was a vice-president or something that was looking for somebody to do his profit, they had a little Softee trucks that ran around --

Q Through the neighborhoods.

A Through the neighborhoods in Baltimore and I would do that from 12 to 5 or 6 to earn some more money.

I was saving my money, and I saved and saved and then the next year I think I worked also at Green Spring Dairy and my goal was to get a '74 Camaro and we went and looked at the car, priced the different
