any more enuists in the Poor People's Campaign until the Memorial Day rally because the movement lacks the funds to house them.
Lafayette gave no details of the holiday demonstration, but said, "We are expecting no less than a million people." He offered no substantiation for the estimate

The figure would be five times as high as the 200,000 who participated in the historic civil rights rally here in 1963

HELP EXPECTED Pressed with questions on how the Poor People's Campaign may continue to meet its mul-tillion-dollar costs, Lafayette said, "We feel the American people will come through."

Asked about report that protesters might be sent to fashionable hotels and the bill sent to the federal government, Lafayette said, "If there is no other housing, some people feel this is a possible alternative."

The short, slender Baptist minister had said earlier in the day the campaign was $1 million short of completing its encampment. Then he raised this to $3 million at the news conference

The latter sum would mean about $5,000 for each of the simple, tent-shaped wooden shelters.
