Subject: Houston-area refineries post-Harvey

Hello, since DOE was tracking the status of refineries affected by Harvey in the storm's immediate aftermath, I'm wondering if you had some insight into how they're doing – generally – now.

An advocacy group is calling for state environmental rules that were halted after Harvey to be reinstated. Not asking for DOE's comment on that. But, the group says it's "not aware of any companies that are experiencing continued operational difficulties as a result of Hurricane Harvey..."

Does that sound accurate? Is DOE aware of any Gulf Coast refineries/other industrial facilities that are still facing Harvey-related operational challenges?

Thanks,
