DR. LESTER BRUSHLOW RE OCCUPATIONAL HEALTH HAZARDS

WALTER CRONKITE: In Philadelphia today the President of the American Public Health Association hit out at what he called 'industry's subtle and powerful prohibition' against scientific investigation of occupational health hazards. Dr. Lester Brushlow cited as examples: black lung in the coalfields, white lung in the cotton mills, and agents linked with cancer in the rubber, dye and asbestos industries, and among lead, zinc and copper miners.
