Dr. Robert H. Kehoe,
Kettering Laboratory,
College of Medicine,
University of Cincinnati,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

Dear Dr. Kehoe:-

I have another lead poisoning case, but this time it has nothing to do with gasoline. The allegations are that a man who worked in a place where it does a lot of electro-plating acquired lead poisoning. Two physicians are going to testify, quoting the attorney against me, "that the man had lead poisoning, and that he died of tuberculosis which was brought on by the lead poisoning, and there is a very strong and direct connection between lead poisoning and the tuberculosis."

Can you refer me to a book which I may purchase and make part of my library that will give me real information on lead poisoning, and its relationship to various diseases, or which will touch on the lack of such relationship?

With warm personal regards, I am,

Sincerely,

George H. Detweiler
