Mike,

EPA is withdrawing the no action assurance for glider manufacturers and their suppliers. After consulting within EPA and in light of the pending administrative and judicial petitions and motions, as well as the application of Agency guidance regarding no action assurances to these particular facts, Acting Administrator Andrew Wheeler found that the application of current regulations to the glider industry do not represent the kind of extremely unusual circumstances that support EPA's exercise of enforcement discretion. EPA will continue to work expeditiously to finalize a solution that provides regulatory relief and prevents any inadvertent economic harm to the glider industry while maintaining important air quality protections.

Hey guys,

I've heard from sources that you guys are going to withdraw the NAA on glider kits? I heard the announcement was coming sometime today. Could I get a copy of it?

Let me know. Thanks.

Best,

Mike
