Two special trains with a total of 68 scheduled stops, virtually are carrying the gospel of more efficient pig raising to the farmer's front door.

Swine specialists from the extension service of Iowa State college are abroad to explain how the same number of pigs can be raised from fewer sows and how proper feeding and care will make them gain more rapidly. Crowds are averaging 1000 persons at each stop.

The Iowa pig crop plan includes fitting the herd to the farm, improving herds by careful selection, crop to the farm by considering the available feed supply, the equipment and capital, available time other enterprises such as dairy or beef cattle, and probable production and demand.

George Bycroft, Adams county farmer who used the Iowa pig crop plan last year, produced 91 pigs from 10 sows and had them averaging 231 pounds at 180 days of age.
