Re: Byoris V. Witco (Discovery only); Monsanto, et. al.
Superior Court (Middlesex) Docket No. L-027600-89

As a followup to prior correspondence on the discovery, enclosed please find:

1) Test results for PCB content in heat transfer fluids covering the period 1980 - 1986, together with tables showing installation dates of the heaters and flushing dates, together with invoice and related documents on the Oakley Service flushing of 1981 - 1982 ("Label Heater Fluid Test Results");

2) Purchase documents describing the physical equipment consisting of the aroclor heaters 2, 3 and 4 ("Label Heater Purchase Descriptions"). We have been unable to locate documents for heater 5, but note that this heater is the same type (American Hydrotherm) as Nos. 2, 3 and 4. Heater 6 was installed in 1979 and never used PCB heat transfer fluids. Heater 1 has a manufacturer's plate listing "Abbe Manufacturing" but we have been unable to locate documents. Neither this heater (No. 1) nor its related parts (e.g., fluid pump) have been the source of any heat transfer fluid leakage;

3) Manufacturer's sheet and purchase documents for the mechanical (pump) seal installed for heaters 2 - 5 in 1983, replacing earlier model mechanical (pump) seals ("Label Pump Seal").

In connection with the above, we have located manufacturers' schematic diagrams for the American Hydrotherm heaters (nine diagrams) and for the Abbe Manufacturing heater (one diagram, marginally legible, of "Torrance Model"), as well as a 1967 American Hydrotherm Instruction Handbook. All of the foregoing bear a legend indicating the information is the property of the manufacturer. Since we do not wish to incur potential liability for voluntary dissemination, we suggest this matter be addressed by appropriate court order if any party seeks these particular documents.

Photocopy and related charges for the enclosures will be noted in future correspondence.

Very truly yours,
