Bob:

This morning I learned from Mrs. Campbell that you are somewhat averse to buying more books on statistics, since no one but me in the Lab uses them. I am very anxious to have these books when I leave. It looks to me like there is an opportunity here for you to get rid of them at cost price, and for me to get them without going to the trouble of ordering them. If you are willing, I shall be glad to give Miss Sheppard a check for the cost of the four books on the attached list.

I would also like to purchase the five additional items on that list which I have been using for some years. Since they have been used doing Laboratory work, I would like to get them at less than the cost price.

I would also like to buy, on a similar basis, 4 of the Scholanders, a few of the clamps, several of the syringes and gas sample holders, and some of the rubber bags and tubing and mercury you have purchased for me, and have the syringe holders Henry Huettnner has made for me. I regret I cannot use all this gas analysis equipment, but it will be some time before I do research again. Dr. McGuire has agreed to pay for certain of the remaining Scholanders.

All the rest of the books and equipment I have been using should find general laboratory use, except for some broken packages of special graph paper I'd like to have.

Sincerely,
