From a quick scan of these articles, the only thing I saw connected with PCBs was a brief mention of replacing lighting ballasts. There's a lot of discussion about asbestos, chlordane, and "pesticides" and some mention of radon and lead in drinking water. There's also a big political battle about appropriating more money for schools and closing some schools due to declining enrollment. PCBs don't seem to be an issue. Could the contamination "concern" be a means of achieving political goals of more money & fewer schools?
