Attention of Mr. S. P. Rady

Gentlemen:

One of our officials is questioning the advisability of the use of leaded gasoline in our internal combustion motors that operate within our various production buildings, it being his contention that the fumes from this type of fuel are more harmful than fumes from unleaded gasoline.

Can you conveniently supply us with authoritative unbiased information on this subject?

You may recall that our present practice is to burn "Q" grade.

Regards and best wishes.

Yours sincerely,

L. E. Ackerman
