or assemblymen were with the Governor on his insistence on a single policy making director so that responsibility for water decisions could be fixed.

A majority of the senators were equally insistent water is too vital subject to place responsibility in an all powerful department head. They said he would be a czar. Many senators come from mountain counties which are the source of the State's water.

When the Senate, for bargaining purposes, gave all the policy making to a board instead of a director, the Senate and Assembly versions of the bill went to a conference committee.

What emerged was a bill which in substance provides:

In making "all major departmental determinations, policies and procedures, such as departmental recommendations to the Legislature, the director and the board shall be in agreement whenever possible."

But, to fix responsibility to the Legislature and the Governor, "in the event of disagreement between the director and the board upon such matters, the views of the director shall prevail.

CAN IGNORE IT.

Thus, the director came out as the boss. If he doesn't like the board's thinking on a policy matter, he can ignore it. However:

"In such situations a written report upon such disagreement shall be made immediately to the Governor and to the president pro tem of the Senate and the Speaker of the Assembly by the board and director."

The Governor read the bill and quickly said:

"I will approve it in this form."

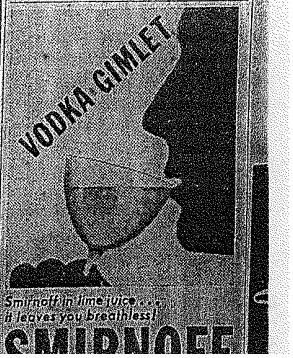

Assemblyman Weinberger called up the measure in the lower house, explained it presented an "adequate framework" for a department and improvements could be made in January. He won a unanimous vote. It was that quick.

In the senate, it was slower going.

Two roll calls, pressure from the Governor and the bill was passed.

The policy board, in the department, will take the place of the present State water resources board. The members will be chosen by the Governor for four-year, staggered terms.

A majority of the legislature may remove a member for dereliction of duty, cor-
