rise up and call them blessed. It is sometimes said, the lecturer declared, that Christian Scientists place their textbooks above the Bible, but this is not so. The textbook exalts the Bible as no other book has done, the lecturer stated, and students of Christian Science study the Bible, the authorized King James Version, as they have never studied it before.

Because God is everywhere. He is properly defined as the "All-in-all," the speaker stated. From this we perceive that there is nothing outside of God, no wisdom, no intelligence, no presence, no power, no being.

In the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, man is defined as follows (p. 591): "The compound idea of Infinite Spirit; the spiritual image and likeness of God; the full representation of Mind." Without man, God would be incomplete; and man without God could not exist, Mr. Carney said.

have, or ever will have, come from the source of infinite good alone, he said.

The speaker explained that the method of healing in Christian Science is that of prayer—the prayer of spiritual understanding. Prayer changes nothing real. But it does show that what we already have, what unlimited power and intelligence we already possess, and how we may make use of them. Man does not heal, but God does, said Mr. Carney. Man can only realize the Truth, for the Truth is the only physician and healer.

Thought recognizes no limitation of distance, therefore Christian Science can be used as a protection for loved ones on the field of battle and for the prosperity of our countries under arms, Mr. Carney affirmed.

In concluding, the lecturer said that the purpose of Christian Science is to present to a world in need, the practical, operative power of prayer. It shows how our lives may be transformed, he stated, through eliminating the mental traits and characteristics which impede our progress in the home, in society, and in business. It also shows how we may aid in directing the course of the nations from darkness to light—and victory.

aers, supervisors, superintendents, foremen and refrigerating engineers employed in the seafood industry were included in the list of "critical" occupations furnished local draft boards in considering deferments.

Peterson, chairman of the house merchant marine sub-committee of fisheries which has been seeking action to permit deferment of key workers in the fisheries industry, said the statement was given him by War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt.

The house committee, after hearing industry representatives testify that it would fall one billion pounds short of the 1944 production goal set for it by the War Foods administration unless its key workers were protected, recently called on the WMC and Selective Service to classify 18 occupations in the industry as "critical."

Peterson said efforts now were being made to have the other occupations listed by the committee included in the critical list.
