Ray Dankenbring, public relations man for Ralston Purina, called today with this information:

Tests have indicated the presence of PCBs above 5 ppm in turkey flocks in the central Missouri area around Montgomery City. As an alert, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and Ralston Purina are issuing a joint release.

I thanked Ray for the information, told him I would contact the operating company directly involved and asked him if he would send us an advance copy of the release when he gets it. I told him you would probably want to contact him directly. His number is 982-3237.
