Now I really am cc'ing Paige, who I omitted last time.

We're aiming for about 30. It won't technically be a "roundtable," because our table isn't big enough, but it will be a close setting with a select audience, conducive to discussion.

My guess is that any time of day will be good for this particular format; our invited audience will want to be there.

When are your meeting typically or when do you get the biggest crowd? As of now, that date is open so it's really up to you unless Tate and/or Millan have any suggestions.

That works great for us. Many thanks. Do you want to pick a particular time of day — morning, midday, end of the day — or should we hold the whole day for now.

I'm cc'ing Paige Mathes, who runs Hoover's operations.

Thanks again—

All the best,

Adam

Hi Adam,

In response to your email below, Dec 13-15 works for the Administrator. Should we say Dec 13? Let me know what time I should hold.

Thanks!

Subject: October/December dates for an event

Tate,

I checked with my office, and it looks like the week of October 30 is kind of a mess for Hoover. A lot of the staff and fellows (including me) will be at Hoover's HQ in California for much of the week, and later we have events with HR McMaster and others.

Could we propose some December dates? I know that Dec. 4, 13, 14 or 15 work so far.

Best,

Adam
