STRIPING

An easy way to enhance the beauty of plain walls.

Striping brings effective color contrast

BEDROOMS with personality! Bedrooms with an artistic touch! You can easily and inexpensively create them by the simple expedient of employing striping on one-tone walls.

In many ways striping may be used effectively in hotel bedrooms. By using a different striping color in each case it is possible to have a different color scheme for each room, even tho the sidewalls are all painted the same color. In a suite the monotony of one-color walls can be relieved by proper striping.

Corridors, too, with their broad wall spaces, can be made bright and cheery by striping. Stripes around door frames bring an extra note of color to corridors—a finishing touch of real distinction in the decorative scheme of a hotel.

How to use this finish

The striping effect is easy to secure. The stripes should be applied parallel to the trim, a few inches away from it. The line is indicated by snapping a taut chalked string against the wall surface. The stripes are then struck off by means of a lining-brush, or added by tamping on color through the openings of a stencil. If a glazed finish is employed, a border motif may be obtained by the wiped stencil method.

Free Decorative Service.

Color specialists in our Department of Decoration will be pleased to assist you, without charge, in planning any decorative wall treatments you may have in mind. They will help select the schemes of treatment and submit color suggestions for your approval. If you wish, they will write the painting specifications. For all interior painting, woodwork as well as walls, it pays to use paint made of Dutch Boy white-lead and Dutch Boy flattening oil. This paint is durable, washable, economical. And its decorative possibilities are unlimited because it can be tinted to any desired color.

Booklet on Decorative Painting

"Decorative Possibilities of Paint" contains further information about striping. In addition, it pictures and describes other distinctive wall finishes appropriate for hotel rooms. Write for this helpful booklet, using the coupon below. Send it to our nearest branch.

In this hotel bedroom, striping adds a touch of distinction to an otherwise plain decorative scheme. At the same time the dignity associated with one-tone walls is preserved. Distinctive interiors of this type are often of first importance in planning for the comfort and pleasure of guests. Women, especially, like the distinctive, the unusual.
