It was in Mr. Sherwin's personal possession until his death. At the Golden Jubilee Convention, November 13th, 1916, during Mr. Geo. A. Martin's session covering Manufacturing Department matters, it was opened by Philip Steyer, the foreman of the S.W.P. Grinding Department of the Cleveland Factory. Philip Steyer entered the employ of the Company in 1874, and was foreman of the S.W.P. Department when this S.W.P. was made. The can was made in the Cleveland Tin Can Department under a patent granted to Mr. Sherwin August 28th, 1877.

On opening the package, it was found to be in good condition, stirred up easily. The change in shade was only what is normal with color of this kind. Though the paint had thickened up slightly it would have been in perfect condition for use by the addition of a slight amount of Linseed Oil.

It was also examined by the Manufacturing Committee; then hermetically sealed and put into the historical collection.
