I.C.I. Paints Division, Slough

With reference to your letter February 15th, as far as I can trace the Paints Division are not big purchasers of asbestos. Obviously they use small quantities of packing and jointing, but very little in the way of textiles.

Mr. Deykin supplies them with Syndanyo and asbestos wood, which he thinks are used to test the effect and finish of various paints.

I would share Newalls opinion that the insulation requirements would be small indeed.

I attach hereto a cutting from "The Scotsman" today, which may be of interest to you. There is no doubt that cases of "the jitters" are becoming increasingly common in this part of the world.

No doubt you will show the attached clipping to any other parties who may be interested.
