It is time to face facts: State and local government agencies are struggling when it comes to collaboration.

There are many reasons why the focus on transitioning to a more open government has stalled.

No other sector faces a tougher challenge when comes to improving internal and external communication. Agencies must balance a move to transparency and citizen engagement, while making sure that they are still guarding against the spending waste, data leaks and inefficiency.

Online document management is key to collaboration because it helps government employees better work with peers, partners and businesses by streamlining processes and helping them manage the massive number of documents needed for day-to-day operations.
