

Good contemporary architecture and cost-saving ideas are combined in this home, chosen as the house-of-the-month by American Builder. Low, sweeping lines dominate the exterior, which has asbestos-cement boards, an economical material noted for fire-safety and durability, as its siding. Battens over vertical joints add interesting shadows.

"Old Company," organized in the same year, it has a balcony facing the street which was added during restoration in 1963. The building has been used as a private residence during recent years. During the whaling days, the first operating between the California coast and the Sandwich (Hawaiian) Islands numbered 640 vessels.

Behind the left-hand door, inside of clothes wardrobes. Pushing the right-hand door aside reveals the laundry tray, or set-tub, and washing supplies. Behind the left-hand door are the washer, clothes basket and water heater. (When washing is to be done, both doors are slid far to the left and the homemaker is ready to proceed, as easily as that!

Lovely Livable

A delightful modern living room with one window wall has the facing wood-paneled wall stained in a rich mahogany tone.

The ceiling is painted to blend closely with the mahogany.

The third wall, which has the fireplace as its main feature, is of brick, painted white.

Silhouetted against the fourth wall—which is also stained in the ruddy one—is the railing of the staircase that leads to the upper level. The handrail is mahogany color, but the spindles are enameled white.

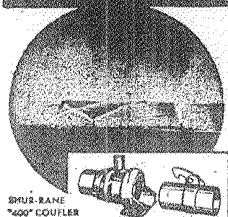

Chrome Care

The lustrous chromium plated finish on faucets, drain controls, showerheads, and other fittings in bathrooms, powder rooms, and kitchens may lose its original beauty because of improper care. Harsh abrasives or cleaners should not be used on chromium. Regular cleaning with soap and water will keep chromium bright. After washing, chromium should be dried with a soft cloth.
