Just talked with Rod Diehl at Chevrolet Bay City and discovered that the Department of Natural Resources are stirring up a kick in the Bay City area. Apparently they just found 70 ppm PCB in fish around 2 weeks ago in the Bay City area. Personnel at Bay City are again sitting on pins and needles waiting for any possible repercussions. So far nothing has happened. Rod said that measurements on his own plant effluent both phenol and PCBs are decreasing significantly. The phenol is less than 5 ppm.

Rod Diehl and I will keep in touch with each other on any new occurrences. He asked also that we pass on any information we have concerning any changes in the PCB situation as it effects the State of Michigan.

Rod asked that all information which passes between he and I re-main strictly confidential. I will keep you posted on any new occurrences.
