John Pasquale, III

John phoned the office last week very much concerned about our taking Therminol FR-2 off the market and wanted to review his application in detail to make sure that substitute fluids would work well. Pasquale, Sr. the originator of the idea of their internally heated sealed laminating and embossing roll was also at the meeting.

They were concerned about substituting FR-1 for FR-2 but after reviewing the properties they would go ahead on this basis. They have over a thousand of these rolls in operation, all sealed. They have only four higher temperature applications, these with ABS plastics, using Therminol 77. At one time they built a few rolls using heat transfer stalls for some super high temperature calendering. Discussed some Therminol 88 and they were very much interested in keeping an eye on this for the future.

In complimenting them on their completely sealed system, long before our drive for sealed systems, I learned that they had been reprocessing their rolls for quite a number of years and dumping the used Therminol out the back door near the local stream. Discussed the PCB situation and fluid reclaimation via Findette since there is a price advantage to them as well as a pollution advantage in saving the fluid from returned rolls in a drum and shipping it once or twice a year to Findette, they plan to do so.
