Subject : Tanker Truck Incident

Reference :

TO : D. L. Sliney

This morning at 8 a.m., the driver of a tanker truck transporting phosphorus trichloride (same chemical as Sunday's release) from Krummrich to Everett noticed some fuming at the rear of the truck. He was in the eastern suburbs of Cleveland on Interstate 90. The driver pulled over and summoned local authorities (who closed the eastbound lanes of the interstate for 90 minutes).

Virtually no material spilled; as a precaution, authorities did put down some lime and then wet the area. There was no vapor, no human exposure, no injury, etc. The safety equipment on the truck worked properly and thus helped prevent a more serious incident. By 10 a.m., the truck was back on the highway and the traffic lanes were reopened.

Several television crews filmed the truck and interviewed the local police chief, who told them that there was never any danger, the equipment worked properly, the driver did the proper thing, etc. No media calls have been received either at the plant or here in our offices.
