B. North American Truck Market - Heavy Duty

The heavy duty truck market continues to show improvement. July retail sales of 6,258 units represents the healthiest month since the pre-buying phenomenon of March which was caused by the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982. North American truck factory sales for June posted the highest increase since March, and the second highest since July of last year. Factory sales for the first half of 1983 declined 18% from the first half of 1982. However, like medium duty, the second half of 1983 was entered with a growing market as opposed to the 1982 market which was in a state of decline during the second half. The forecast for 1983 remains at 85,000 units.
