Small irregular densities partially obscure the bronchovascular markings in the lower 2/3 of both lungs. The left diaphragm margins are unclear. There is minimal thickening of the pleura along the lateral chest wall on both sides. These findings are consistent with, but of themselves do not establish, a diagnosis of asbestosis.

He is short and heavy. There is some prominence of the bronchovascular makrings at the bases, especially on the left. Stereo and overexposed PA suggests this is due to inadequate lung expansion. I believe the films are within the limits of normal for his body build.

The bronchovascular markings are unusually prominent in both lungs, especially at the bases. In the presence of a history of substantial exposure to respirable asbestos fiber, the appearance of these films would suggest a diagnosis of asbestosis.

The broncho-vascular markings are prominent throughout both lungs. There are several heavy linear densities opposite the 3rd and 5th rib on the right and an irregular rounded density opposite the 5th rib on the left-these appear to be the evidence of previous infections.

A complete occupational history and a medical history as to pneumonia and other lung infections are needed for adequate evaluation of this film.
