Gene,

In response to your questions:

1) Item 2 - We are continuing to keep up as far as Safety & Housekeeping Inspections and LPR's (Loss Prevention Reviews) are concerned. I feel that plant personnel are well aware of the need for safety reviews of changes and they are conducted in a timely and effective manner. As you know we are behind in TLPR's (Triennial Loss Prevention Reviews). Strides are being made in this area and I hope to have them all back on track by the end of first quarter next year.

2) Item 4 - I agree with you. The old ANSI guidelines used prior to OSHA calculations used 6000 days as the figure assigned to any fatality. This would be more reasonable than the possibility of assigning zero days for a fatality.

3) Item 6 - This must refer to the OSHA confined space entry standard on which I sent comments to Ray Witter earlier this month.
