Waterfowl Regulations

With October comes the migratory waterfowl hunting season in California, so today's column will deal mostly with the dates, boundaries, regulations and prospects.

First of all, the season opens in the Tule Lake-Klamath Basin in the north and Colorado River strip in the south—open Tuesday, Oct. 11, for a straight 90-day season, ending Jan. 8. This is because those areas are in proximity to Oregon and Arizona, both of which have the straight 90-day season.

The remainder of California—and that embraces Imperial Valley and the Salton Sea—opens Saturday, Oct. 15, for a 90-day season. First half runs from Oct. 15-Nov. 20 and second half, Dec. 10-Jan. 8.

So that you will know just what comprises the Colorado River strip, here are the boundaries: Area east of Hwy. 85 from the Nevada border to Blythe, the main road from Blythe south through Imperial Valley, Pata Verde and Quila to Hwy. 50 and Hwy. 90 east to the Colorado River at Yuma.

Each half limit is six per day and in possession in all split seasons and in the Tule Lake-Klamath Basin and the Colorado strip is four per day and eight in possession to match the regulations of Oregon and Arizona. With such differences in law and possession limits, it looks like a top morning headache for the waders who try to enforce the law.

THERE ARE MANY specifications about the species of birds you can kill, such as: Statewide limit on geese is six, three of which may be of the same species. Yet, in the Imperial Valley-Salton Sea area and even along the Colorado River strip, not more than one Canada goose may be included in a daily bag limit and none after Dec. 15.

There are regulations on ducks, too, which you should study.

For your information, you should have a copy of the DFG's pamphlet on state-ordered shooting areas, which is a daily change in order from what booklet you can get all the information necessary to make applications for reservations, which must be filed 10 days in advance of the time you wish to shoot. Space in this column does not permit full amplification of the regulations and regulations.

However, there are two in Southern California: (1) Water Unit in Imperial Valley, with shooting days Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays, opening and closing days, Columbus Day and Veterans' Day. (2) Finney and Farmer-Lake, near Victor, are open every day of the week, but are for boat hunters only and you must supply your own boat (without motor). Those lakes will accommodate 80 hunters at one time. Water can handle 150 hunters per day.

AS TO PROSPECTS, the general situation looks more encouraging than it did a month ago, but still the weather remains the main factor. No signs have occurred to drive great flocks of ducks from the north. There is a steady buildup of hundreds of thousands of birds at Tule Lake and Klamath Basin refuges. Likewise, the refuge south of Wilton is literally covered with birds.

Ducks Unlimited reports from Canada that the early and late of the summer was far better than had been anticipated, particularly in those areas which supply the Pacific Flyway.

All that doesn't mean a thing to Southern California until the weather changes. It has been too hot even for deer hunting in most of the state, so you can't expect ducks and geese to start a mass migration southward. At this writing, there are a few thousand pintails, teal and spoonbills on the Water Unit, about normal for this time of year.

A state hunting license is required for waterfowl shooting. In addition, you must possess federal ducks stamps, which may be bought at the post office. Along with the stamps is a form, which the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service expects you to fill out and mail. This is important for the future of ducks and your own shooting.

Other hunting notes: Dove season is ended. Rabbits are still legal. Inland deer season continues through Nov. 8. Unland game seasons don't start until next month.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS—The seventh annual Colorado outboard cruise from Blythe to Martinez Lake takes place next weekend. It is limited to boats from 12 to 18 feet in length. Last year more than 400 boats carrying 1,500 persons took part. The cruise is sponsored by the Blythe Chamber of Commerce and any information may be had by calling that organization.

Walker Lake's annual outboard derby is scheduled to begin Saturday, Oct. 15, and continue through April 20, 1961. All those entering the derby must register at El Capitán Lodge in Hawthorne, Nev. There is a $300 top prize for the largest outboard caught in the derby period.

R. H. Hart, public relations chairman of the Composite Hunting and Fishing Club, announces the annual deer shoot for next Saturday and Sunday. Any four men (or fewer) may compete for the stack of trophies and prizes. Registration of teams starts at 12:01 a. m. Saturday at the CH&F clubhouse, 1622 Spaulding Dr., Compton, and the shoot runs at 8 p. m. Sunday when all teams must return to the clubhouse.

Memo to surf fishermen: Best fishing seems to be along the Long Beach Marina entrance channel and in some sections of Newport Harbor, where spottin' combers up to five pounds are hitting well.

Robinson May Quit After Bout

By FRANK HARVEY

Sugar Ray Robinson, considered by many the greatest fighter in recent years, may wind up his remarkable career at the conclusion of his 15-round fight with middleweight champion Gene Fullmer in the Sports Arena Saturday night.

Robinson, former welter and lightweight champion, and five-time world champion, will be making his sixth bid for the 160-pound bubble.

However, the 34-year-old Harlem Dandy is given little chance by the experts to lift the crown from the rugged Utah min rouser.

Whether the champion can beat Robinson into oblivion, as he did Carmen Basilio in 12 rounds at Salt Lake City last June, is questionable. It was from Basilio that Fullmer won the crown in San Francisco in August, 1959.

ROBINSON has been crowned best boxer in a conventional boxing match extending over 20 years. The title was won by Ray when he was by Jimmy Watson when Sugar Ray made a futile bid to win the light heavyweight title back in 1932.

Fullmer has been stopped but once, too. It was one of the fights in which Sugar Ray claimed the title.

Most Robinson supporters claim that he never actually lost the title, but only leased it out for short durations in order to reclaim it, along with a handsome purse.

In two recently nationally televised fights, Robinson lost disputed decisions to Paul Pender in Boston. Pender is recognized as middleweight champion in New York and Massachusetts.

While we thought Robinson was robbed on both occasions from what we observed on the television selected fight programs, television will be blacked out for a radius of 250 miles in the Los Angeles area. There will be no radio may night, but Fullmer will be his better choice.

Veteran ring observers claim that unless Robinson can win by a knockout inside of eight rounds he could suffer the second knockout of his career.

Age has slowed him up, and with Fullmer putting on the pressure, Robinson will have to call on his boxing savvy to keep out of the way of the mauling mink man.

Promoter Cal Eaton hopes for a capacity crowd of 17,000 fans in the Sports Arena for the bout which is expected to draw approximately $125,000 at the box office. An additional $100,000 will be derived from television.

The fight, which will start at 8 p. m. kicks off the first of the Saturday night national television selected fight programs. Television will be blacked out for a radius of 250 miles in the Los Angeles area. There will be no radio

Arch 'KO's' Pair of Mat Behemoths

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI)—Light heavyweight champion Archie Moore knocked westerner Ray and Ray Shires to a bloody pulp in a special exhibition in the Indianapolis Coliseum Saturday night.

The event was scheduled for six two-minute rounds, with Moore weighing 192 pounds to the combined weight of the Shires announced as 461 pounds.

Moore knocked Ray Shires down three times, once in the first round and twice in the third. Shires refused to be counted out with Moore winning five judges decision by an overwhelming margin.

Low Net to Combs

Ernie Combs took top honors in the Virginia Country Club Sweepstakes Saturday.

Low net Ernie Combs, 42, of the Virginia Country Club, won the $10,000 prize in the 100-yard event. He was followed by Ray Shires, who finished second, and Archie Moore, who finished third.
