They listened attentively as Lieut.-General Sir Denis Bernard, governor of Bermuda, explained that a large section of St. David's had been chosen for base sites.

They accepted the announcement with no murmur of protest. They did more than that. At the instigation of S. Seward Toddings, one of their representatives in the house of assembly, they adopted a resolution declaring that they wished to express their "loyalty to the British empire by accepting the sacrifices in a spirit of support for the ultimate winning of the war against Germany and Italy."

"KING" MAYOR LOSER.

Among those who are affected is Henry Mortimer (Tommy) Fox, known to many Americans as the "uncrowned king of St. David's." Nobody knows exactly how he came by the title, but certainly one reason is that the 87-year-old St. David's islander was one of the first to venture off the island into other sections of Bermuda.

Tommy Fox owns many acres of land in St. David's, and he will lose most of them to the United States government. In his day he was one of the colony's most successful whalers and after one of his voyages he says he crawled down the throat of his catch to prove the possibility of the Bible story of Jonah and the whale. This gave him another title—"The Second Jonah."

The problem of finding new homes for the islanders is a big one, and a special committee has been appointed to handle it. Since the United States has not yet started work in St. David's, the matter still hangs fire.

PHILADELPHIA, March 28. (AP)—A retired U. S. circuit court judge, William Fox of movie fame and one of his attorneys were indicted today on a charge of conspiracy to obstruct justice in court matters dealing with bankruptcy proceedings on portions of Fox' once vast $35,000,000 financial empire.

A federal grand jury specially instructed by Attorney General Robert H. Jackson reported it had found evidence that Fox and Morgan S. Kaufman knew that Judge J. Warren Davis, while on the bench "would be interested in and would accept and receive . . . sums of money and other payments" in return for "action favorable" to Fox.

The 62-year-old, bald-headed producer whose motion pictures made screen history stepped to the bar immediately after the charge was made, entered a plea of guilty and from his pocket paid out five $1000 bills for bond.

District Judge Guy K. Bard deferred sentence until April 14, issued bench warrants for the other defendants who were absent and set the same date for their arraignment. A similar bail also was fixed. Davis appeared later and posted bond.

Marriage Ruled No Claim Against Mate's Property

Superior Judge Charles W. Davison rules yesterday that Catherine Perkov Negro, 52, acquired no rights to the property of Vittorio Negro, 61, Gilroy rancher, simply by marrying him.

Nor, ruled the judge, did Vittorio acquire rights to her property.

He then granted Vittorio an interlocutory decree of divorce from Catherine.

The Negro family troubles have been in court since November 8, 1940. They were only married 61 days before he filed divorce proceedings.

He claimed she wanted his ranch as a condition of marriage and she claimed he threatened to "dynamite" her. She asked for separate maintenance. This was denied in the judge's decision.

CCC to Extend Defense Training

WASHINGTON, March 28. (AP) —James J. McEntee, director of the civilian conservation corps, announced today that during April the CCC would be in position to offer employment and national defense training in almost all states to every eligible youth in need of employment.

At the same time he said a gradual reduction in enrolled strength and number of camps would be initiated April 1, simultaneously with the beginning of a replacement program to enroll 65,000 young men and war veterans to fill vacancies which will occur in CCC camps next month.

McEntee pointed out that substantial improvement in employment prospects for young men in the CCC age groups, 17-23 inclusive, had made it possible to effect the reduction in strength, and at the same time open the opportunities of CCC training to virtually all eligibles.
