Dear Bob:

All too long ago you wrote offering to be of assistance if help was needed. I have received many offers of help and these together with other matters have had me swamped to the point I have not responded as promptly as I should have. However, it may have seemed to you, I assure you your offer was not forgotten.

Although not of immediate concern perhaps, there is one thing which I would like to see done and perhaps you would consider undertaking this. I refer to the development of a historical review of the American Industrial Hygiene Association. I feel that something like this would be extremely worthwhile and would be of considerable interest to our members. I am afraid that if we put this off much longer, we will never be able to recapture some of the past.

Will you do this--either alone or recruiting others to help. If such can be done, we could run this in the Journal or get out a special printing.

We have had many problems this year or perhaps I should say a carryover of problems. I think we are back on the track now and hope I can leave the State of the Association in good shape when I bow out as President. The Journal, incidentally has been given to another printer and hopefully will be mailing two issues per month until we get caught up.

Best regards.

Sincerely,

Paul D. Halley
