To whom it may concern at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency,

The International Liquid Terminals Association (ILTA) is writing to express that affected sources in the Gasoline Distribution source category, 40 CFR 63 Subparts R and BBBB, may have urgent reason to seek Presidential Exemption from certain emission standards and monitoring provisions of these subparts.

Founded in 1974, ILTA represents 70 companies operating liquid terminals in all 50 states and in over 40 countries. Terminals provide essential logistics services, support domestic and international trade, and foster the readiness of the United States armed forces by making fuels and liquid products available throughout the world—products such as
