How to build work-easing paths in

Your Victory Garden

with Kraftile patio tile

Building Kraftile paths through your victory garden is one of the easiest things you can do to make your gardening simpler. And when the rains come, Kraftile paths will prevent the soil between your beds from becoming soggy and muddy, and will keep your garden trim looking. All you do is level and pack the ground . . . cover with a thin layer of sand for a secure base . . . then lay your Kraftile several inches apart in straight rows. It's as easy as that!

...always easier if there's an almond tree in the yard. Nonpareil and Ne Plus Ultra or Jordanolo are good varieties with soft shells.

ORNAMENTAL ASSET

We must not overlook the persimmon which is an ornamental asset long into the dormant season. The persimmon may be pruned to give it a "weeping" effect by heading it off, topping it at about four feet. Handled this way, it can well be included in the ornamental section of your garden.

Cherry trees usually take more room than city gardens can afford and where only one or two trees can be planted, birds often harvest the entire crop. However, your nurseryman may supply you with a cherry grafted on Morello root. This tends to dwarf the tree.

Either the Payne or the Franquette walnut can be planted in Central California. The most available place in the average city home is in the parkway.

ALREADY BUDDED

Most deciduous fruit trees sold by nurserymen are on two-year-old roots with one-year-old tops. The budding to a desired variety has already been done, and the amateur's job it to plant it correctly and give it good care.

Although trees will not be available for at least 30 days, preparations can be started now. A hole three feet deep should be dug and a cache of fertilizer buried at the bottom, covered with a foot of soil. The most common mistake is placing the tree too deep in the hole. Never plant a tree deeper than it was growing in a nursery. Never plant a tree with the bud buried.

Allow at least 15 feet, preferably 20 feet on all sides of deciduous fruit trees. Use the space around it for vegetable production until the tree reaches bearing size.

YOU CAN GROW
PEONIES HERE

Plant now in a well-drained loamy bed with full morning sun and have lovely soft huge flowers next spring. If we do not get plenty of rain through the winter, see that they are well watered.

If you have adobe soil we will be pleased to suggest to you how to prepare the soil.

We offer the following large roots—3 to 5 eyes each—for the best-named varieties in a wide range of color for your selection:

AVALANCHE—Large double pure white ..... 80c each
BARONESS SCHROEDER—Double flesh white ..... 75c each
INSPECTEUR LAVERGNE—Double dark red ..... 80c each
LAURA DESSERT—Double white and yellow ..... $1 each
MARTHA BULLOCH—Large double deep pink ..... 80c each
MINNIE SHAYLOR—Another really fine double white ..... 75c each
MONS. JULES ELIE—Double deep rose ..... 80c each
MR. L. VANS LEEUWEN—Double light red ..... $1 each
