Dear Director (Robert A Kehoe M.D.)

I read of your & the baby & that of the farmer boy poisoning & was going to route to some lab for research on the effects of lead exposure & lead was when you detected it still was there after many years.

My father was a painter for 30 yrs & did vacuum & was told to get out & left 7 yrs ago. He started losing his memory & other things went from bad & worse upset mental condition till he was cremated by 163 & he had severe blue stroke (multiple cerebral emboli resulting in subtotal paraplegia) including special studies, than the Dr. says he has up any more arteriosclerosis than the average person (& that's what they thought he had) & those clots had to come from somewhere & he doesn't have valvular heart disease & clot would likely come from there so he thought maybe the lead in the system had roughened areas or broken loose dislodged clots in vessels & he was wondering what the final effects of arsenic or lead poisoning were when it was accumulated slowly over long period & person didn't die.

He can't walk, can't stand himself, we have to lift him out of bed in chair, etc. He eats when we feed him.

Sometimes words has says are illegible.. Other times they misdated or [illegible]. However he don't think because answers he gives are [illegible] to the questions.

So, would you think lead or arsenic poisoning could be causing any of this? And would the EDTA cure any good for this or would that only be used on short-term exposure when its diagnosed right away. The Dr. was interested in the final effects of arsenic &/or lead poisoning when still living. Are there any new cures.

Thank You.
