Here you go, Tate.

“The Dallas Builders Association commends EPA Administrator Pruitt for holding this roundtable in Dallas to get direct feedback from home builders and developers who are affected by burdensome regulations that raise the cost of housing and harm small businesses,” said Dallas BA President Michael Turner. “The nation’s home builders support the administrator’s efforts to enact a revised waters of the U.S. rule that will protect the environment without adding unnecessary regulatory burdens that will hurt housing and other industries in Texas that rely on a predictable permitting process.”

Meanwhile, can you give me a sense of who the Administrator will be bringing with him to the meeting?
