uses that create interesting accents against a background of green shrubbery and lawn.

According to John Rice, San Diego brick manufacturer, even a person working with brick for the first time "will discover that ease in building with brick comes with amazing short experience."

However, for an individual working with brick for the first time, Rice recommends the initial job be a small and comparatively simple project.

"With such a project, one gets the feel of handling and building with brick," Rice said. "It is an art which should be considered with a bit of awe, for man has been building with brick since prehistoric times."

A small, back yard barbecue fireplace is an ideal first-time project. Reasonably simple and inexpensive, it provides an interesting masonry job.

The cost of brick and needed accessory materials for building a small barbecue will amount to about $15, Rice said, and it probably can be completed in a single weekend. A few simple tools are needed: hammer, string, a few temporary nails, trowel, spirit level and a broad-wheeled cold chisel.

Cost of these tools will be less than $3, all available at your local hardware or neighborhood hardware store.

In purchasing bricks and other materials, it is a good idea to discuss the plans with the dealer. He will offer advice concerning the popular types and colors. The brick is laid spread out on the ground. Right location of the brick places correct perspective. Drainage, brick pattern, available, mortar composition, and other important factors are considered.

Basic requirements for brick construction are a solid and uncomplicated plan and that they are important and fundamental.

"With completion of your initial job of brick barbecue," said Rice, "you will find yourself thinking of other brick projects which will add much to the enjoyment and beauty of your home."

"Additional jobs can be built to the original fireplace, including walls, outdoor paved patio, ornamental pool, and other structures to make it a really complete recreational area for your home."

"You will find real satisfaction in doing home improvements with brick. It is a building material which has a remarkable ability to harmonize and add beauty to practically any surroundings. This is particularly true with the use of brick for exterior home improvement."

With growing skill in the laying and placing of brick, you will find your self planning larger jobs, both inside and outside of the home. Entry, chimney
