

New Effects in Paneling

By Florence Schmidt

WOOD paneling, always a popular wall finish for living rooms, dining rooms, dens and play-rooms, has inspired a number of new processes in its preparation. Many types of woods, both solid and ply, woods, are now available in paneling that is treated to give a third-dimensional effect. The soft pulp of the wood is removed, by any one of various methods, leaving only the smooth shadowed grain which accentuates the natural beauty of the wood.

In the solid paneling, Douglas fir, redwood and knotty pine are featured but other woods can be proc-
