An alternative action to a one no-trump overcall and frequently more successful is the "trap" pass. When a player has a good portion of his strength in the adversary's suit, rather than overcall one no-trump it may be more profitable to trap pass in hopes of picking up a sizable penalty set. If the opener's partner responds, you have a chance to double. If the hand is passed out at the one-bid, there is no great loss, and if the opening bid is followed by two passes and your partner holds enough to produce a game opposite your holding, he will protect you by reopening the bidding.

A trap pass won the board for today's East defender in a recent team championship. When the hand was bid at the first table, North opened with one heart and East overcalled one no-trump, which became the final contract. East made his contract with an over-trick, losing three diamonds, a club and a spade trick for a score of 120 points.

When the hand was re-played, East made a trap pass of the opening heart bid as shown in the box. South responded one no-trump and East doubled for penalties.

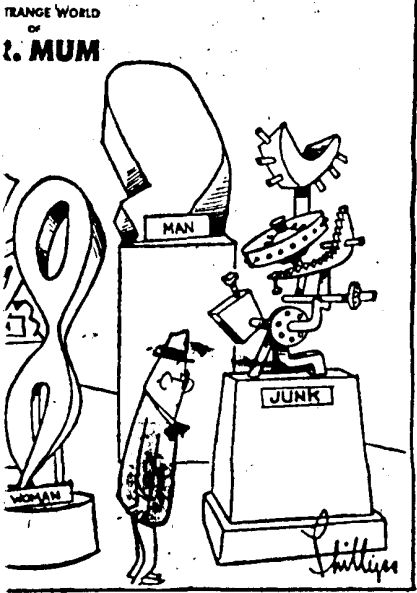

West opened a heart through dummy and returned a heart on regaling the lead with the king of diamonds. South was able to take only five tricks, giving up a spade, three hearts, one diamond and three clubs for down two — minus 500 points. This gave East's team a swing on the board of 380 points.
