Dr. Putnam also noted that in January the Center for Disease Control (CDC) announced the formation of an advisory committee to revise their 1978 statement on childhood lead poisoning. In doing so the CDC failed to follow the federal guidelines for establishing committees. It was LIA's position that the advisory group selected was not representative and therefore legal action was contemplated unless the federal guidelines were followed. LIA has recently been informed that CDC now intends to establish this committee pursuant to the Federal Advisory Committee Act.
