Executive Vice President

Dear Jack:

You probably know that our Galena, Kansas plant is a defendant in a multi-million dollar suit filed by residents in and around our plant who claim that emissions from the plant (lead, zinc, cadmium, etc.) have rendered useless large acreages of land and has harmed the health of the residents.

In any event, we very probably will be wanting to contact some expert witnesses and knowing that you follow this matter very closely throughout the country, I was wondering if you knew of any toxicologists or medical doctors in our part of the country who might be used as witnesses. Our attorneys feel that we might be better off to use "local talent" than to try to overpower the jury with experts from England or the eastern part of the country.

It is entirely possible that I might be able to stop by and see you or whoever is doing this type of work for you, but since this may be two or three weeks, I thought I would write you and let you start thinking.

Best regards.

Very truly yours,
