Institute, we covered that earlier. And I forget what they were, but Johns-Manville must have been one of them. And this was that associate membership so they had just changed to an active member. Associate members did not get all the information that the active members got.

Q Could you give me examples of information that an active member would get that an associate member might not get from the records?

A I retract the last statement. I don't recall this, I don't really know, whatever was said up earlier. Very hard trying to remember things of 50 years ago that were written 25 years ago. And there is something in there about three companies decided not to join and during the transition American Brakeblok Johns-Manville and Thermoid wanted to get information but they didn't want to become regular members. So now after that period was over, this was 1948 now comes 1955 or something, they decided they want to become a member so they transferred over to a regular membership. I'm trying to give a history of people coming in and going out.

Q Do you have any information as to why in this time period Johns-Manville elected to become an active member?

A I have no idea.

Q When you say there was considerable activity as
