Dr. Fleck

A stereo radiographic examination of the chest shows no peripheral lung infiltration to suggest the presence of pulmonary tuberculosis. There is a moderate thickening of both hilum zones and a peri-bronchial fibrosis extending into the middle and lower portions of both lungs. There is no pleural thickening or effusion. The lateral diameter of the heart measures 16.5 cm. The inside diameter of the chest measures 32 cm. This indicates slight cardiac hypertrophy. The fibrosis noted is presumably the result of chronic irritation and is sufficient to confirm a clinical diagnosis of first stage asbestosis.
